Decrease in New Home Construction not a problem for Deco Truss

“In fact, we’re busier than ever”, says owner Mario R. Espineira, Sr. who along with wife, Sonia, and son, Mario, Jr. operates the Princeton, Florida based company. Deco Truss Company, established in 1983, offers a wide selection of trusses and building supplies for contractors as well as do-it-yourselfers.

While the economy is stagnant and new home construction has slowed in South Florida, Deco Truss Company, which recently relocated to its brand new $2 million, 8.5-acre facility, is thriving. The truss company has expanded its operations to include a lumberyard offering exotic hardwoods, high quality hard and soft woods, decking, plywood and building materials, including tools, custom cut and bent rebar, hangers and straps, as well as an architectural showroom featuring specialty doors, moulding, hardware and accessories.

The new facility, which employs a team of engineers using state-of-the-art technology, was built to keep up with Deco’s overwhelming demand for trusses and the increasing need for a high quality full service lumberyard in South Florida. Using sophisticated architectural software and computer driven saws, Deco Truss designs and builds trusses for all types of roofs, from the standard gable style to elegant, custom built homes and commercial projects including restaurants and churches.

Deco Truss Company, which originally opened its doors on a small lot in Princeton, Florida over 20 years ago, has strong ties to the community. After Hurricane Andrew, Deco Truss remained in Princeton, helping to rebuild and provide jobs in an economically devastated area. Today, Deco Truss employs over 50 people at its new facility, located only blocks from the company’s original site. “We’re very proud of our staff,” says Mario Espineira, Jr. “They’re extremely knowledgeable and have tons of experience in the building construction industry.”

For the Espineiras, providing only the finest quality products isn’t just an ad slogan, it’s a family tradition. In fact, Deco Truss prides itself on such high standards that either Mario Espineira, Sr. or his son personally inspects every truss order before it leaves their plant. In addition, Deco Truss has enlisted Timber Products, an outside company who performs routine unscheduled quality control inspections, to ensure conformity to the latest building codes and regulations.
